Let's say you're on vacation in the beautiful, remote countryside. There's just one problem...no Wi-Fi! Fortunately, you can activate a mobile hotspot on your phone or tablet to let other devices connect to the internet. You can also configure several features and settings to keep your hotspot private or reduce battery consumption. In a pinch, it's a real lifesaver. Note: Available screens and settings may vary by wireless service provider, software version, and phone model. Mobile hotspots are extremely useful, but there are some things you need to keep in mind when using one on your device: In order to use a hotspot, you must have a tethering plan on your service account. Mobile hotspots consume battery power and use data service. While a mobile hotspot is active, your device's apps will use the mobile hotspot's data service. Roaming while using your phone or tablet as a hotspot may incur extra data charges. Activating a mobile hotspot will disable Wi-Fi. Only LTE tablets can create hotspots, not regular tablets. Oh no! You're working from home and your Wi-Fi just went out! Just use a mobile hotspot on your phone or tablet, so you can get back to work. From Settings, tap Connections, and then tap Mobile Hotspot and Tethering. Tap the switch next to Mobile Hotspot. When you're ready turn off Mobile Hotspot, tap the switch again. You can now connect any compatible device to your hotspot, just like you'd connect it to your home Wi-Fi. Note: Available options may vary depending on the carrier, phone model, and software version. If you don't want strangers using your hotspot, you can hide your device and adjust more options. Navigate to and open Settings. Tap Connections, and then tap Mobile Hotspot and Tethering. Tap Mobile Hotspot, and then tap Configure. The following options will now be available: Network name: View and change the name of your hotspot. Security: Select the hotspot's security level. Password: View and change the password for your hotspot. Band: Set the radio band for the hotspot. 2.4 Ghz is compatible with more devices, and 5 Ghz will provide better performance. You can also tap Advanced to edit additional settings, such as Power saving mode and Wi-Fi sharing. Why has your battery been dying so quickly? It's because you've had the hotspot on continuously. However, with the Timeout settings, you can set your hotspot to automatically shut off if no one is using it. From Settings, tap Connections, and then tap Mobile Hotspot and Tethering. Tap Mobile Hotspot, and then tap Configure. Tap Advanced, and then tap Turn off when no device connected for. Select the desired amount of time before the hotspot turns off. Automatic Hotspot allows your phone's internet connection to be shared with devices that are signed in to your Samsung account, or your Samsung family group. From Settings, tap Connections, and then tap Mobile Hotspot and Tethering. Tap Mobile Hotspot, tap Auto Hotspot, and then tap the switch to turn it on. Tap the switch next to Family sharing to let family members access your automatic hotspot if needed. Next, you will need to set up Wi-Fi sharing. From the Mobile Hotspot Home screen, tap the switch at the top of the screen to turn on and share the hotspot. When everything is set up, you can connect devices to the hotspot. On the device you want to connect, swipe down from the top of the screen to open the Quick settings panel. Then, touch and hold the Wi-Fi icon. Thanks to Automatic Hotspot, the hotspot should already be listed as a Wi-Fi network; tap the hotspot to connect to it. While your device is connecting, do not touch the other device that is emitting the hotspot signal because this could cause connection problems. To turn on Wi-Fi hotspot on your Android smartphone or Android device as a hotspot, see instructions corresponding to the brand of your device:SamsungNavigate to Connections > Mobile hotspot and tethering > Mobile Hotspot and toggle it on. A pop-up window will appear, where you can find the Wi-Fi password for devices that want to connect.MotorolaNavigate to Settings > Network & internet > Hotspot & tethering. Here, you can select to share a connection via Wi-Fi, USB, or Bluetooth.For a Wi-Fi connection, tap Wi-Fi hotspot and toggle it on. The hotspot name will be displayed on this screen. Tap Advanced > Hotspot password for the password.Google PixelPull down from the top of the screen and navigate to Settings > Network & Internet > Hotspot & tethering > Hotspot and tethering. It's worth noting the menu names and locations may differ slightly from manufacturer to manufacturer. Some phones support multiple types of hotspots, including 'Wi-Fi hotspot', 'USB tethering', 'Bluetooth tethering' and 'Ethernet tethering.' These are just different ways to connect your phone to another device to access the hotspot. I typically use the Wi-Fi hotspot as it's pretty reliable, but feel free to test them out and use what feels best for you. Tapping 'Wi-Fi hotspot' should bring you into another menu where you can customize the hotspot's settings, such as the hotspot name (this will be visible to people nearby and will be what you look for in the Wi-Fi menu on the device you want to connect). You can also set a hotspot password and security type, and there may be settings to automatically turn off the hotspot or to extend the range at the cost of the battery. Once your hotspot is on, you can grab the device you want to connect and then head into the Wi-Fi settings and select your hotspot like you would any Wi-Fi network. iPhone To use a hotspot on iPhone, just hop into the Settings app and tap 'Personal Hotspot.' iPhone has the benefit of that "Apple magic," which means if you're trying to connect another Apple device — like your iPad or MacBook — you should be able to easily connect as long as you've got the same iCloud account on both. If not, or if you're trying to connect a non-Apple device, you can toggle on the 'Allow Others to Join' option. iPhone doesn't let you edit your hotspot name — it'll just appear as "[Your name]'s iPhone" — but you can edit the password required to connect. Users can also edit Family Sharing options from this menu, which can enable other Apple devices in your Family group to connect to your iPhone as a hotspot. Some other things to keep in mind While that about sums up everything you need to know to activate a hotspot, there are a few other things worth keeping in mind. First, hotspots use mobile data, so be careful what you do while connected, lest you burn through your data cap too quickly. Next, some carriers may limit or restrict hotspot speed or access, so make sure to check what your provider allows. Finally, your hotspot will likely be slower and less stable than a regular home internet connection. Still, a mediocre connection is better than none in a pinch. If you're stuck in a situation where you need a Wi-Fi connection, but can't get it anywhere else, chances are your smartphone can give you the boost you need. By setting up a hotspot through Wi-Fi or a USB cable, you can turn your phone into a source for internet that laptops, tablets, and other phones can use to get online.It may sound complicated, but you can be connected with just a few taps. Most of the major carriers offer tethering services, though your ability to create a Wi-Fi hotspot depends on your service plan and data allowance. One thing to keep in mind: Tethering eats up battery life in addition to data. Investing in a portable charger is a good idea if you intend to use hotspot mode frequently. If you're ready to tether, here's how to turn your phone into a Wi-Fi hotspot.Turn on Wi-Fi Hotspot For iPhone and iPad To set up a personal hotspot on your iPhone or iPad (Wi-Fi + Cellular), go to Settings > Personal Hotspot > Allow Others to Join and toggle it to on (if you don't see Personal Hotspot in Settings, tap Cellular > Personal Hotspot). Make note of the Wi-Fi password. Open the Wi-Fi menu on the device you need to connect to the internet. Look for your iOS device (ex: PCMag's iPhone), select it, then enter the hotspot password to connect. Once your secondary device is connected, you should now be able to surf the web (and consume mobile data). Your iPhone or iPad can also connect via Bluetooth or direct USB connection. To connect over Bluetooth, make sure it is turned on for both devices and follow the manufacturer's directions for setting up a Bluetooth connection. You may need to turn on Maximize Compatibility to make these connections work, but keep in mind that the quality of your connection may be impacted. If you use Family Sharing, your hotspot can be set up so family members can join it automatically without a password. Open Settings > Personal Hotspot > Family Sharing and turn the feature on. Tap the name of your family members, then determine if they must ask for approval or can join automatically.Once you no longer need the Wi-Fi hotspot running, you can head back to Settings > Personal Hotspot and toggle the feature off.Our Top-Rated Mobile Hotspots Turn On Wi-Fi Hotspot For Android Devices Mobile hotspot on a Samsung phone running Android 10. How you access hotspots on Android devices will depend on which phone you have and what version of Android you're running. You can generally open the pull-down shade and turn on your mobile hotspot from there or find it buried in settings.Where exactly and what it's called will differ depending on your phone's manufacturer: Samsung phones hide it in Connections > Mobile Hotspot and Tethering > Mobile Hotspot. Google's Pixel has it under Network & internet > Hotspot & tethering > Wi-Fi hotspot. Those with a Motorola phone can open Settings > Network & internet > Hotspot & tethering.You can probably find it quicker on your specific device by searching for "hotspot" or "tether." Once the hotspot has been enabled, there should be a network name and password displayed in the settings screen. Enter those credentials in the other device's Wi-Fi settings and join the hotspot like you would for any other network.Other Ways to Get Internet (Photo: Melpomenem/Getty Images) If you need a mobile hotspot but can't use your phone, there are some alternatives to check out. You could instead turn your laptop into a Wi-Fi hotspot. If you're a business traveler who needs to be connected all day, consider a dedicated Wi-Fi hotspot.
